Public invited to comment on PURC's response to initial comments on Tariff Setting Methodology

January 5th, 2021: The Public Utilities Regulatory Commission (PURC) as mandated by the 2016 Electricity Act to set and review the rates that consumers pay for electricity is seeking further input from the public on the regulations guiding the process.

The Draft Regulations on Tariff Setting Methodology have already been circulated for initial public and stakeholders comments, to which PURC has responded. Persons are now invited to comment on PURC's responses.

The regulations are being developed in accordance with the current Act which sets out legislation governing the electricity sector in Grenada.

The Commission anticipates that the regulations will be fair and reasonable, encourage improved quality and security of the supply of electricity and will not be discriminatory or show undue preference.

The relevant documents to facilitate public responses can be found on the PURC's website at www.purc.gd.

The time allowed for comments to the PURC's response document will be ten (10) working days.

Respondents are therefore required to forward comments by January 18th, 2021.

All written responses should be emailed to consultation@purc.gd.
